

SONG FOR LISE

*Who won the heart
who won the heart,
tell me who won the heart of the sea?*
The one with the spirit of the changing winds,
she won the heart of the sea.

*And who won the heart
who won the heart
tell me who won the heart of the wind?*
The one who faced the tempest with a calm in her eye,
she won the heart of the wind.

*What will she share with the sea?
A highway of diamonds scattered by the moon,
and what will she share with the wind?*
The freedom of the breeze blowing soft upon the flame.

*who won the heart
who won the heart,
tell me who won the heart of the sun?*
The one whose smile was a rainbow in the storm,
she won the heart of the sun.

*and who won the heart
who won the heart
tell me who won the heart of the night?*
The one who laid bare all her soul to the dream,
she won the heart of the night.

*and what will she share with the sun?
The lustre of her eye that shines like coffee beans,
and what will she share with the night?*
The slow sweet kiss of surrender to the light.

*And when will we know the one who won the heart?
When the dawn paints her smile with a palette of stars,
then you'll know, yes you'll know,
you will know, yes, you'll know
the one who won the heart.*
